

I wish to express my strong opposition to the loosening of TV/Radio ownership restrictions by the FCC. To do this would concentrate the power of the electronic media under the control of fewer and fewer powerful corporations. I believe the broadcast airwaves are owned by the public and allocated by the government to serve the public, not corporations. This push for loosened restrictions is a play for corporate power and greed and will in no way serve in the public interest. The FCC should therefore reject any proposed changes.
